"what is the recipe for your chicken nuggets?"

NICK R. Ottawa, ON

Our answer:
Our Chicken McNuggets are made with chicken breast and a few seasonings, along with a natural proportion of chicken skin, used for both flavour and as a binder. They're then coated in our tempura-style batter and cooked in 100% vegetable oil.

"Why do all your "McNuggets" look exactly the same?"

BRAYDEN H. Canada

Our answer:
Hi there, Brayden. Look closer: our Chicken McNuggets aren't quite the same. We actually have four different shapes of McNuggets – the ball, boot, bell and bow-tie. The reason that we make our Chicken McNuggets similar in dimension is to ensure consistency. Consistency of shape guarantees portion control and consistent cooking times for food safety.

"Is there any alien in the chicken nuggets?"

SEAN F. Edmonton, AB

Our answer:
There are no aliens in our Chicken McNuggets, Sean. Our McNuggets are made of seasoned chicken breast and a few seasonings, along with a natural proportion of skin for flavour and as a binder. The only thing out of this world about our Chicken McNuggets is the flavour.

"Do you use deformed chickens in your chicken nuggets?"

KURTLIN H. Edmonton, AB

Our answer:
No, deformed chickens are not used to produce any of our products.
All McDonald's chicken products are produced in a federally-registered facility. As such, the Canadian Food Inspection Agency inspects all birds processed in the facility, removing any deformed birds from the process and ensuring that they do not enter the food chain. Thanks for your question, Kurtlin.

"what parts of the chicken do you use?"

CATHERINE P. Ottawa, ON

Our answer:
The delicious ones, Catherine! We use only the breast, thigh, and leg in our sandwiches and McNuggets. Here's how it breaks down specifically: For Chicken McNuggets – chicken breast and a natural proportion of chicken skin; for McChicken – chicken breast, thigh and leg; for Junior Chicken – chicken breast, thigh and leg; for Crispy McBistro – chicken breast; for Grilled McBistro – chicken breast; for Snack Wrap Chicken, grilled or crispy – chicken breast.

"do you feed your chicken growth hormones?!"

KAITLIN M. Winnipeg, MB

Our answer:
Hi Kaitlin. No, the chickens that are used for our product are not raised on growth hormones. The practice is actually illegal in Canada and has been since the 1960s.

"Do you use chicken breast?"

HEATHER E. Toronto, ON

Our answer:
Hi Heather. Yes, we use chicken breast in several of our menu items. Our Chicken McNuggets are made with seasoned chicken breast and a natural proportion of chicken skin used as a binder. Our McChicken and Junior Chicken patties are a combination of breast, thigh and leg meat. And our McBistro sandwiches are made from seasoned portions of chicken breast. You can also get chicken breast in our snack wraps and salads. All white meat. All delicious.

"is the chicken real or pink sludge"

LIAM M. Brampton, ON

Our answer:
Hi Liam. No, our chicken is not made from pink sludge. All of our chicken products, from our McChicken sandwich to our iconic Chicken McNuggets, are made with real chicken meat from the breast, leg and thigh. Our McNuggets also have a natural proportion of chicken skin as a binder.

Monday's concert kicks off jam-packed summer for Saskatoon's homegrown rockers

MORGAN MODJESKI

Saskatoon's Broadway Avenue was packed on Monday evening as more than 3,000 fans lined up for a free concert by homegrown rockers the Sheepdogs.

Backstage at Monday's concert, frontman Ewan Currie said he was glad to back in Saskatoon, noting his mind was flooded with fond memories when he returned to Broadway, a place where the band got its start.

"There's a million of them," said Currie, noting a time when he snuck into Lydia's Pub. "I spent my early 20s on Broadway, so there's a bazillion memories here for me."

He also noted that it's nice to be playing for some familiar faces. The band just returned from an American tour, with their last stop in Texas before heading home.

"We've got friends and families here. Even people that I know enough just to wave and say hello to, so it's great."

Ewan explained the upcoming summer season would be a busy one for the band, as summer means one thing for a travelling group: Festival season.

"Summer is always (full of) festivals, so it's crazy, flying around, getting to all the festivals, in Canada, the U.S., England as well — just enjoying the outdoors and all that stuff."

Fans in the crowd said they felt the concert was an important one to be at, since for some of them, it marked the first time they've seen the Sheepdogs since they've become international rock stars.

"I think it's pretty neat that they're coming back here and doing a free show for the locals — everyone is pretty excited," said 28-year-old Erica Mullen. "They've been really busy, they've been on tour, so them coming back here, I think it will be a good time."

Bikes on Broadway thrills spectators with high speeds

Cyclists unite.
Competitors from across Canada converge on Broadway Avenue

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

Competitive cyclists from across Canada gathered in Saskatoon on Monday morning for Bikes on Broadway's final — and fastest — event.

A three-day race including a time-trial competition, a road race and a criterium — a short-circuit spectator event held on Broadway Avenue — Bikes on Broadway saw 108 riders this year.

That was 13 fewer than last year's 121 riders, race organizer Janice Matus said. She said the long winter was a contributing factor in the lower turnout, but she was happy with the overall attendance.

"I think some of the hesitation was because it took so long for the nice weather to get here," she said.

"A lot of people were hesitant, wondering what the weather was going to be like … so there's a number of factors."

Alongside Saskatchewan riders, people from across the country took part. Lynda Pinter, who came from Calgary to watch her son compete, said that, although it's a little harrowing watching him whip around tight corners at break-neck speeds, she enjoys attending the race.

"It's exciting," she said. "I've seen him go down on corners, which is kind of rare … but the fear is always around the corners. I like watching him, but you get kind of apprehensive because at any time, they can go down."

Racers participating in one of the Bikes on Broadway's most dangerous events known as the criterium take a sharp turn on Monday morning. This year, Bikes On Broadway saw 108 racers from across Canada compete.
MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

Pedro Peralta, a member of the Regina Cycle Club, has experienced what it's like to go down during a race but he said competing in such a high-speed event is thrilling.

"It's kind of nerve-racking, but at the same time, it's exciting," he said.

"Being a shorter rider, I can take the corners a little faster and a little shorter, so I usually try to go as hard as I can … and see if the other riders can follow me."

Tower could take Sask. to new heights

Stalled in planning for at least a year, a downtown Regina condominium tower appears set to begin rising within months — and could become Saskatchewan's tallest skyscraper.

Preparations for the Capital Pointe project at Victoria Avenue and Albert Street will be visible beginning on Tuesday, when the city starts closing sections of traffic lanes running along the site to allow SaskPower to get infrastructure ready for the mixed condo, hotel and retail development.

"This building, when completed, will be the tallest building in Saskatchewan," Toronto-based development firm BrightStar Corp. says on its website for the project, which was announced in 2009.

The development is slated to include a 26-floor residential tower and adjacent hotel, along the lines of what the developer proposed in the spring of 2010, before its approved city building permit expired two years later due to a lack of progress getting started.

"The proposal we have is for a 26-storey apartment tower and a 10-storey hotel. They would be right beside each other, with retail and restaurant use at the base of the building," said Fred Searle, the city's manager of current planning, adding that the development at the site of the former Plains Hotel would be "almost identical" to the earlier proposal.

"The basic form of the building has not changed, and the overall uses that they're proposing."

It isn't clear what had stalled construction. However, Capital Pointe is also listed on the website of the Augustine Group of Niagara Falls, Ont.

Searle noted that the developers appear to "have gone through some restructuring … and different partnerships," and have submitted a new construction permit application.

"That application will be going through the review process over the course of the next three to four months," he said.

"Once the building permit is obtained, they could proceed with construction work on-site."

Developers plan to announce details within days.

"We're going to be making an announcement in Regina in the middle of (the) week," said Greg Black, BrightStar's director for the project.

"We don't have much more to say at this point."

Elijah Harper. Mourners salute MP who blocked the Meech Lake accord

Elijah Harper THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hundreds lined up inside the Manitoba legislature on Monday to pay their respects to Elijah Harper, the aboriginal politician whose quiet but firm resistance to the Meech Lake constitutional accord became a symbolic moment for indigenous rights.

"He gave us all inspiration to know that it's OK to say no sometimes," says Derek Nepinak, grand chief of the Assembly of Manitoba Chiefs.

Young and old made their way past the casket, adorned with a Manitoba flag and an eagle-feather headdress. Nearby were portraits of Harper with an eagle feather in his hand, similar to the one he held in 1990 when he denied the unanimous consent needed to rush the accord through to final approval.

Harper was elected chief of Red Sucker Lake in the late 1970s and elected to the Manitoba legislature in 1981. He was in the NDP opposition benches during the federal government's 1990 attempt to enact the Meech Lake accord, which had been crafted to win Quebec's signature on the Constitution.

Harper believed the deal gave his people short shrift.

"He stood firmly in his identity, in his roots," Shawn Atleo, national chief of the Assembly of First Nations, told reporters Monday.

"Those of us that are younger, we continue to stand in the shadow of great moments like that. Our work continues."

Mexico. Canadian and his American friend vanish — families fear kidnapping

Mexican media outlets are reporting that a Canadian and an American have gone missing from the resort city of Puerto Vallarta.

The online newspaper Noticias PV says Diego Hernandez, a Canadian martial-arts instructor, and his friend Craig Silva vanished on May 8.

The paper says Puerto Vallarta's director of public safety, Silvestre Chavez, didn't learn of the men's disappearance until five days later and has launched an investigation.

A Facebook group that aims to collect tips about the men's whereabouts says their families fear it was a kidnapping.

It says the pair were last seen in Silva's truck, a black 2003 Chevy Trailblazer, which has since been recovered by Mexican authorities.

Queen skewered on Victoria Day

The Queen would likely not be amused by the way Victoria Day was observed in Montreal on Monday.

At a rally of hardcore Quebec nationalists, a handful of people threw darts at a photo of the Queen. Others held up signs saying, "Down with the monarchy" and "Quebec will soon be a republic."

There is little love for the monarchy in Quebec. Monday's public holiday is now known as the Journee nationale des patriotes, to mark a rebellion against the British in 1837-38.

Pierre Veronneau, who made the dartboard, called the royal family "parasites" who "do absolutely nothing."

Like many present, Veronneau hopes for an independent Quebec in his lifetime.

The event attracted at least two politicians: Bloc Quebecois chief Daniel Paille and Jean-Martin Aussant, who heads the small provincial independence party Option nationale.

Monstrous tornado rips through Oklahoma City suburb, killing dozens Tragedy. Tornado warnings posted all the way from Texas to Illinois in wake of deadly twister

A woman carries a child near the collapsed Plaza Towers Elementary School in Moore, Okla., on Monday, after a tornado nearly a kilometre wide with winds up to 320 km/h roared through. SUE OGROCKI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A tornado of rare power roared through an Oklahoma City suburb, killing at least 51, flattening neighbourhoods with winds of up to 320 km/h and destroying at least one school. Officials said children were among the dead.

The death toll was expected to rise, an Oklahoma Medical Examiner's Office spokeswoman said. Rescuers swarmed the debris as darkness fell.

More than 140 people were being treated at hospitals, including about 70 children. Some were in critical condition.

"Hearts are broken" for parents looking for their children, Gov. Mary Fallin told a news conference.

The ferocious storm — less than one per cent of all tornadoes reach such wind speed — ripped through the suburb of Moore in a region of the U.S. known as Tornado Alley.

Block after block lay in ruins. Cars and trucks were left crumpled.

The National Weather Service estimated that the tornado reached up to a half-mile (0.8 kilometres) wide and was an EF-4 on the enhanced five-point Fujita scale, the second-most powerful type of twister.

In video footage, the dark funnel cloud moved slowly across the landscape for more than half an hour, scattering shards of wood, pieces of insulation, shingles and glass over the streets.

The focus quickly turned to Plaza Towers Elementary School, where the storm tore off the roof, knocked down walls and turned the playground into a mass of twisted plastic and metal.

Several children were pulled alive from the rubble. Rescue workers passed them down a human chain to a triage centre in the parking lot.

James Rushing, who lives across the street, heard reports of the approaching tornado and ran to the school, where his five-year-old foster son, Aiden, attends classes. Rushing believed he would be safer there.

"About two minutes after I got there, the school started coming apart," he said.

Dangers remained. Downed power lines and open gas lines posed a risk Monday night, police Capt. Dexter Nelson said. Television footage showed at least one fire in the debris.

RCMP asked to vet legality of gift to senator

The federal New Democrats have asked the Mounties to determine whether Prime Minister Stephen Harper's former right-hand man broke any laws by cutting a personal cheque to cover an embattled senator's improper housing expenses.

The NDP's ethics critic, MP Charlie Angus, wrote to RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson on Monday asking the force to look into the actions of Nigel Wright.

Wright abruptly quit his job on Sunday as Harper's chief of staff, days after it emerged that he gave Sen. Mike Duffy $90,000 to repay his housing claims.

Angus says the gift may have broken the law. He added that Harper had a duty to explain to Canadians just what happened.

"We haven't heard the prime minister say that a secret cash payment to a politician is wrong, and whether the prime minister knew, at what point he knew. He must have known something," Angus said.

Sen. Mike Duffy THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

"Because if it happened under his watch and he did nothing about it, that would be absolutely shocking."

Harper is expected to address the Conservative caucus on Tuesday morning before departing for South America to attend trade talks.

Wright's resignation followed that of Duffy, who left caucus on Thursday facing a potentially humiliating showdown with his Senate colleagues. Colleague Pamela Wallin, who is facing her own expenses audit, also stepped down on Friday.

The ethics commissioner is also looking into Wright's repayment of Duffy's expenses.

Yahoo buys Tumblr; CEO makes promise not to 'screw it up'

Social media. Deal is biggest move of Marissa Mayer's 10-month reign

Yahoo is buying online blogging forum Tumblr for $1.1 billion US as CEO Marissa Mayer tries to rejuvenate an Internet pioneer that had fallen behind the times.

The deal announced Monday is Mayer's boldest move since she left Google 10 months ago to lead Yahoo's latest comeback attempt. It marks Yahoo's most expensive acquisition since the Sunnyvale, Calif., company bought online search engine Overture a decade ago for $1.3 billion US in cash and stock.

While hailing Tumblr as a fount of creativity that attracts 300 million visitors each month, Mayer told analysts Monday that she is "making a sincere promise to not screw it up." David Karp, a high-school dropout who started Tumblr six years ago, will remain in control of the service in an effort to retain the same "irreverence, wit and commitment to empower creators," Yahoo said.

Karp, 26, may now have a managerial mentor in Mayer, 37. Tumblr, which will remain based in New York, has about 175 employees while Yahoo has 11,300 workers.

Viewing habits. Netflix CEO takes on conventional TV

Netflix CEO Reed Hastings is standing in line at a bustling Toronto coffee shop, summing up a speech he's set to deliver later in the day on the future of television, when he spies an example of his vision that's so perfect it almost seems planted by his PR team.

Smiling, he points to a young couple oblivious to their surroundings in the crowded café. They're snuggled together behind a laptop, sharing a pair of earbud headphones, and engrossed in a video they're streaming via the in-house Wi-Fi. "People look to Netflix when they have some time to relax, some time to kill, and want some stimulation, and that's not limited to the living room at 8 p.m.," Hastings later says in an interview. "What's great about an Internet service, whether it's YouTube or Netflix, is you can (use) it on many different platforms — that's really where TV is going."

Netflix recently published a letter to shareholders outlining how the firm believes it will thrive at the expense of conventional broadcast TV.

Lotsa lamb chops left in the lurch

Hundreds of tons of frozen mutton, lamb and beef from New Zealand have been stranded on Chinese docks after China halted their import due to a certification dispute.

China is New Zealand's largest consumer of sheep meat. It has blocked all New Zealand frozen beef and sheep meat that has arrived in the past two or three weeks, said Dan Coup, trade and economic manager for the Meat Industry Association of New Zealand.

The meat sitting in freezers at the docks is worth tens of millions of dollars. Because it is frozen, it will last months, Coup said.

Web entrepreneur sues for return of Twitter handle

An Internet entrepreneur and former Wall Street derivatives analyst contends central Idaho's Sun Valley resort and Twitter Inc. heisted his handle.

Leonard Barshack, who in the 1990s founded the Internet email listing service Bigfoot, is suing Twitter and the Sun Valley Co., demanding they return the handle @sunvalley.

Barshack filed the lawsuit in Idaho's 5th District Court with his lawyer and wife, Erin Smith, this month, arguing he began using the Twitter handle in April 2010.

The Sun Valley logo as it appears on the resort's Twitter account. TWITTER

He eventually wanted to use it to promote business in the region, Barshack said, only to have Twitter tell him late last year he was violating the San Francisco-based company's policies against impersonation.

"One day I woke up, and Twitter had taken my handle away," Barshack said Monday, adding his appeals for Twitter to reconsider have yielded only "boilerplate" responses, forcing him to sue.

"They just came and took my ball away," he said. "That's being a bully."

The dispute underscores how Twitter has become a powerful marketing tool companies like Sun Valley Co. can use to market wares to potential customers — and how aggressive they can be when they conclude somebody is squatting on valuable Internet real estate. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Apple uses offshore firms to avoid U.S. taxes, inquiry finds

Apple Inc. employs a group of affiliate companies located outside the United States to avoid paying billions of dollars in U.S. income taxes, a Senate investigation has found.

The world's most valuable company is holding overseas some $102 billion US of its $145 billion in cash, and an Irish subsidiary that earned $22 billion in 2011 paid only $10 million in taxes, according to the report issued Monday by the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

The strategies Apple uses are legal, and many other multinational corporations use similar tax techniques to avoid paying U.S. income taxes on profits they reap overseas. But Apple uses a unique twist, the report found. The company's tactics raise questions about loopholes in the U.S. tax code, lawmakers say.

Apple CEO Tim Cook, the company's chief financial officer and its tax chief are scheduled to testify and explain the company's tax strategy at a hearing on Tuesday.

WHY CAN'T WE ACCEPT PRAISE?

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

There's a fine art to accepting a compliment graciously. Most people have a tendency to offer up self-deprecating responses rather than acknowledging positive feedback.

Here are a few actual examples that I've overheard in real life:

" Your new haircut looks fantastic. "Seriously? You don't think it's too short? It's definitely too short; I look like a boy."

"I love your new dress." "Oh, I just found it on a rack at Value Village. I swear I only paid $5.99 for it."

"Congratulations on finishing med school!" "Thanks but I have no idea how I pulled that off. I'll probably accidentally sever off an arm or stitch someone's mouth shut in, like, the first week."

Now there's nothing wrong with a little modesty, but it can be problematic when we're constantly deflecting flattery rather than recognizing our own hard work.

In my experience, it seems that women are far more likely than men to rebuff positive attention with a dismissive hand wave or a reciprocal "no you're so great" comment. We've been socialized to value lady-like decorum over boastfulness and as a result, we have a hard time owning up to our talents and achievements.

I rarely respond to compliments in an appropriate manner. I know that I should reply with a heartfelt "thank you" but I'm far more likely to fall back on a sarcastic retort or a "thanks BUT (insert qualifying statement that undermines my success in some way)." I'm working on my graciousness because I know how annoying I'm being when I act like this.

Recently, a friend invited me over to her apartment for a small dinner party. I spent a large portion of the evening remarking on how delicious the food was, but she repeatedly brushed me off and insisted the meal was so easy to prepare that even the biggest kitchen klutz could recreate it. Here was this culinary whiz acting as if she had simply toasted a slice of bread and making me feel foolish for lavishing her with praise.

It sucks to be on the receiving end of a snarky retort when you're trying to offer up kudos for a job well done. I know how frustrating it can be when someone refuses to take admiration seriously or gives you a dismissive eye-roll and yet that doesn't stop me from doing the same thing.

While it might make us feel uncomfortable to acknowledge our own awesomeness, I think it's an important skill to learn. People are usually being genuine when they pay you a compliment and it's only polite to respond in a sincere and courteous manner. Besides, we all deserve to be proud of ourselves and toot our own horn every once in a while.

Q and A

'Make sure to have your feet on the ground and head in the stars'

STEPHANE VETTER
Doctor and amateur photographer, 50

How did you capture this photo?
To photograph something as broad as the aurora, you need to make a panoramic image. So I took four vertical images and later joined them together on a computer program. Each photo had an exposure time of 15 seconds and the entire panorama took less than two minutes to take, but I had to wait three hours for the Milky Way to be near the horizon.

What lasting impression should we take from this?
Make sure to have your feet on the ground and head in the stars. People have lost their relationship with nature, so we must reconnect. METRO

"This photo has many winning elements: The Earth-sky connection, beautiful stars and outstanding phenomena like the aurora borealis."

RE: Harper To Be On Hot Seat At Tuesday Caucus After Chief Of Staff Quits, published online May 19

Tsk, tsk, tsk. The Tories are throwing themselves under the bus, again, just like the good old days.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper's appointments are turning into a cement anchor just as the suddenly badly listing Tory ship is looking for a safe harbour to steam towards — and a new captain to get it there. Harper should resign. Tsk, tsk. tsk.

Meanwhile, it looks as though new Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau won't have to do or say a thing between now and the next election to be elected prime minister.

Stories We Tell

Actor/director Sarah Polley's personal documentary is extraordinary in every way, from its post-modern structure to the raw emotion of its carefully revealed family secrets. Stories We Tell isn't just about any family, but Polley's own. She and her loved ones summon the necessary courage not only to delve into extremely difficult subjects, but also to face up to life-altering consequences. Seeking definitive answers for long-whispered family rumours, and using her film as an investigative tool, the Toronto filmmaker unearths a blunt fact: Michael Polley, the man who raised her since her 1979 birth and whom she still calls Dad, is not her biological father. Stories We Tell is as direct as a blood transfusion. It's a film of fact, remembrance and forgiveness, with no clear path. You just have to trust in Sarah Polley's steely determination and follow her relentless lens. In a word: wow.

"I honestly don't think my career will get any better than this," says Ken Jeong. "I think I've peaked."

Jeong returns in The Hangover Part III as Mr. Chow, the violent gangster with a heart of gold. Or at least fool's gold.

"He's a villain who likes to laugh," says Jeong. "Mr. Chow changed my life," he says.

"He opened up a new world for me and I was able to work a lot as an actor because of the first Hangover. Now this is the biggest role I've ever had, in the part that I'm most well known for. You can't ask for better than that.

"This is beyond anything I ever expected. When I quit my day job as a doctor I just wanted to be a working actor. I just wanted to have lines in movies. That's all I ever wanted."

Before finding fame as an actor, Jeong lead a double life — practicing medicine during the day and doing standup at night.

"I wasn't trying to keep (the two lives) separate, like Clark Kent separate," he says. "It was my hobby, my golf. It was a way for me to keep up with the intense hours of medicine. Work hard, play hard mentality."

These days he is in touch with some of his former patients.

"I have patients that I email with or keep in contact with on Facebook and they're always happy for me because I wasn't a wacky, schticky guy when I was a doctor.

"I was pretty intense and pretty serious.

"The stuff I get now from my patients is, 'We're just so happy you have an outlet. You were just so serious. We thought you would explode.'

"When they found out I did standup comedy back in the day when I was practising medicine they'd say, 'I'm so happy for you. You've finally found a way to channel all this stress out.'"

The Hangover Part III is the finale of the series, but Jeong would like to see Mr. Chow go on more adventures.

"Mr. Chow, and I'm not saying this because I'm promoting the movie, is my favourite character," he says. "The spectrum of imagination on that character is so wide.

"I would love to see him in any situation and see what he would say or do. I would love a Chow spin-off. I love that character so much."

Twilight twosome splits, but sources say it won't be for too long

Kristen Stewart is reportedly "heartbroken" and "so sad" over the breakup with longtime boyfriend Rob Pattinson over the weekend, according to E! News. But sources close to the newly ex-couple are still optimistic the split is only temporary. "They are going to stay living at Kristen's house because of the dogs," a source says. "It's not fully over or he would have moved out. They will be back together in no time."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Pop Goes the Week

Walters, wolves and a weight watch? What a week!

STARGAZING
Malene Arpe
scene@metronews.ca

Barbara Walters announces she's retiring. Unfortunately for Barbara, due to Angelina Jolie's news, this was not the most fascinating announcement of the week.

Kristen Stewart's mother Jules gets a restraining order against a weird neighbour who insists Jules keeps wolves in the house and keeps harassing her about it. Well, if anything, that would explain where Taylor Lautner has been since Twilight ended.

Seth Meyers is set to take over Late Night when Jimmy Fallon takes over The Tonight Show from Jay Leno, who took over from Johnny Carson. "Whew," say women and people of colour, "we dodged another one."

Allure Magazine prints Zoe Saldana's weight on the cover. That's a good editorial decision, because the fact that Zoe is now a star of three major movie franchises is, like, so whatever.

Demi Lovato says her tour rider calls for incense, pickles and instant ramen. Add mayonnaise and that's pretty much a list of all the worst things in the world.

Curry back to us! NBC seeks to suck up as Angelina asks for only Ann

NBC is looking to smooth things over with Ann Curry, the Today show co-host that was unceremoniously dumped from the show last summer, in the hopes that she can score the first sit-down interview with Angelina Jolie following the actress' revelation that she underwent a double mastectomy, according to Radar Online.

"Angelina made it known after Ann was demoted from Today that the only journalist to interview her from the Peacock network would be Curry," a source says. "Ann would be prominently featured in all of the promotions and publicity if Angelina agreed to do it." Looks like it's time for the network brass to make nice with Curry.

Fighter gets Fast and Furious

Interview. Mixed martial arts pro Gina Carano stars in the sixth instalment of the popular action flick and talks about training and diet rules

ROMINA McGUINNESS
life@metronews.ca

Gina Carano can beat you in a fight. Deal with it. HANDOUT

Gina Carano as Riley in Fast & Furious 6. GILES KEYTE

You're a tough chick but you look almost petite next to the Rock. What did you do to assert your dominance?
I just fed off his energy. It's kind of an intimidating thing, the size difference. But he's such a lovely person. It just made me want to mirror that kind of energy.

He's big but lovable. Does the guy get manicures between takes? Or does he try to act tough?
He's very mysterious. I'd like to say he's a big softie but he takes himself seriously.

What do you do to stay in shape?
I train everyday. I do Muay Thai and Jiu-Jitsu. You go through phases when you're training: you start out and you're like, "This is brutal." Then you're laughing and think, "This is ridiculous!" By the time you pull it together you get a second wind and you get focused and it's just the best feeling.

All that kicking and punching, you must need a lot of fuel to keep going. What's your diet like?
It's been a long road to get here but I have a very healthy relationship with food. I'm just normal. You go through ups and downs of figuring out how your body responds to food but sometimes you have to cheat and eat some pasta you know? When you start putting too many rules on something you get a bit anal about it and it's counterproductive.

Your co-star Michelle Rodriguez looks like the kind of girl that doesn't take anything. Were you on guard when you first met her?
She is feisty. I've been around feisty people my whole life, so I didn't have any expectations. I gave her a chance to be exactly who she is. We had great chemistry — she's the first actress I've ever worked with physically. We had to trust each other.

You guys fight a lot in the movie — is it all for real or stunt doubles?
I do all my own stuff but she's quite tiny. I grabbed her wrist to handcuff her and I was like, "What!" She has the tiniest little wrist I've ever seen. But if you don't walk away with some pain, you don't feel like you did your job.

You've worked with both Channing Tatum and Michael Fassbender. Now, girls have obsessed over Channing's abs in Magic Mike and Michael's bum in Shame. You've actually seen them both, up close. What would you score their assets, out of 10?
He's known for his bottom? I respect them too much to rate that. Channing has worked so hard to be taken seriously and Michael is just automatically taken seriously.

Most guys like the fact they're the stronger one — physically — in a relationship. But you're a martial arts expert and could probably beat the heck out of anyone. How has this affected your romantic relationships?
You don't know any of my ex-boyfriends. They could have been strong. My ex-boyfriend got me into Muay Thai and we would go to the gym and spar. But my relationships are private. I don't want to talk about him.

Do you ever look at people and think, "I could totally kick your butt."
If you don't like someone, of course you have that kind of thought sometimes. You kind of get violent fantasies and then you're like, "Wow! why did I do that?"

Your last professional fight ever. Who would you want to be up against and why?
The person I lost to: Cyborg. You always want to avenge that.

Give it everything

"Hold (your) arm straight up and bring your hand, held upright, close to your body. Close your fist tight and make sure you have a strong wrist. Bring your strength up through your feet, through your hips and put your body into it. You want to have a small target, so try to focus on the first two knuckles. Now give that everything."

Picnic pick: Pesto Potato Salad

This salad serves eight to 10. MARK SHAPIRO, FROM ROSE REISMAN'S ENLIGHTENED HOME COOKING (ROBERT ROSE)

for more, visit rosereisman.com or follow her on twitter @rosereisman

Traditionally, potato salads are made with loads of mayonnaise, sour cream or oil. My lighter version has a delicious pesto sauce with some crunchy vegetables. It goes great as a side for any barbequed items.

1. Put potatoes in saucepan with cold water to cover; bring to a boil and cook for 20 to 25 minutes, or until easily pierced with a sharp knife. Drain and set aside.

2. Meanwhile, put basil, olive oil, pine nuts, Parmesan, garlic and salt in food processor; process until finely chopped. With the processor running, gradually add stock through the feed tube; process until smooth.

3. In saucepan of boiling water or microwave, blanch snow peas for 1 or 2 minutes, or until tender-crisp; refresh in cold water and drain. Place in large serving bowl, along with pesto, red onions, red and green peppers, corn, green onions, pine nuts and lemon juice. When potatoes are cool enough to handle, cut into wedges and add to serving bowl; toss well to combine. ROSE REISMAN'S ENLIGHTENED HOME COOKING (ROBERT ROSE) BY ROSE REISMAN

Ingredients

- 2 lb scrubbed whole red potatoes with skins on

Pesto

- 1 1/4 cups fresh basil leaves
- 3 tbsp olive oil
- 2 tbsp toasted pine nuts
- 2 tbsp grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 tsp minced garlic
- 1/4 tsp salt
- 1/4 cup chicken stock

- 1 cup halved snow peas
- 3/4 cup chopped red onions
- 3/4 cup each chopped red and green peppers
- 1/2 cup corn kernels
- 2 green onions, chopped
- 2 tbsp toasted pine nuts
- 2 tbsp lemon juice

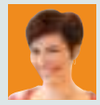
Up in the spring ramp



NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert DHN, RNCP
myfriendinfood.com

I recently asked a friend if she liked ramps. Her response was, "What the @$#! are they?"

Only the best thing to happen to spring in a long time. Ramps are wild leeks or wild garlic, depending on who you talk to. They grow across the country in sandy, moist hilly places, often near water. But it is illegal to forage for them in Quebec, where they are protected. Leave the foraging to the hunters and head to a farmers market this month.

Culinarily, both the leaves and bulb are edible and they taste like a cross between onions and garlic. Given their short growing season, you want to add them to just about every pasta, pizza, soup and sandwich spring brings.

Susan Quast at Quast's Garden Gate in Flesherton, Ont., is part of the Grey County Chefs' Forum. She says, "Sauté them in a little butter and then add them to a favourite recipe. You can add them to your salads, chopped with raw potent flavour. The leaves, which are less potent than the bulb, can be used as a wrapper for crab meat appetizers." THERESA ALBERT IS A FOOD COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALIST AND PRIVATE NUTRITIONIST IN TORONTO. Tips to turn the first date into many more Dating coach. Advice from Amber Madison, a Manhattan-based relationship expert and the author of Are All Guys A–holes?

Don't talk only (or mostly) about yourself
So you've travelled to every continent, do something really important/prestigious and have a bunch of funny stories exhibiting how you can kill the one-liners. The problem is, no one likes to be talked at — even if it's really impressive. There can be a rush to get out all of the positive things about yourself on the first date to try to keep the other person interested. But if you're so concerned about how you're coming across, you're not actually connecting with the other person … which, you know, is sort of what the date is about.

Don't be difficult to pin down
If your next free night is three weeks from this Tuesday, maybe this isn't the best time in your life to be starting to date someone.

Don't go out to dinner
First of all, if you're a guy this can start to add up fast. But more than that, dinner is a high-pressure situation where you're forced to keep up the conversation because there are no other distractions. This doesn't exactly lend itself to you putting your best foot forward. Instead of dinner (or even drinks) plan an activity date.

Ask job interview questions
The things we talk about on a first date tend to do with where we grew up, went to school, or what we do for a living … all things that are painful to talk about repeatedly and don't actually get to the crux of who a person is. If you want your first date to be fun and stand out, ask things more along the lines of: what is the creepiest thing you've ever done? What's the closest you've been to getting arrested? Have discussions about getting along with siblings/parents, what you think makes a good movie, whether brunch is awesome or an overpriced breakfast. Really have a conversation together, don't just take turns reciting your resumés.

Don't start planning your wedding
So the date went well? Awesome. But don't let your fantasies get the best of you and convince yourself that this is The One. The truth is, after one date — even a great one — you just don't know someone that well yet. So stay open minded to both the good qualities and the bad instead of painting a full picture of the person you just met based on your very limited information.

New rules for authorized credit card users

Alison on money. Putting a cap on monthly spending helpful for parents of students

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

I pay scant attention to announcements from my credit card company. Mostly they're telling me about higher fees, restrictions in benefits or otherwise trying to sell me something. But recently CIBC announced a change to authorized user rules for its credit cards. This got my attention.

A primary user can now set a monthly spending maximum for each authorized user. This could benefit parents with students studying, working or interning away from home.

For example, parents paying all expenses for graduates on an unpaid internship might set a high limit. A college or university student living at home might have a lower limit with the agreed use restricted to something like gas for their car.

Setting up a student as an authorized user can offer peace of mind for parents in case of emergencies, but you don't want to put too much credit temptation in front of them.

I have one caution. For emergencies, such as a plane ticket home, the limit must be relatively high. If it is used, the limit is automatically reset the next month, giving the student access to a new amount of credit.

However, the primary user can raise or lower the authorized user's limit during a given month.

It is important to have a clear agreement for authorized users. For students, insist on a monthly spending report. This will help young people take responsibility for their spending and is the first step to making a budget. But parents must still keep watch online and don't let any transgressions slide.

Another possible reason to have an authorized user is when a family member has gone through a bankruptcy and doesn't yet qualify for a credit card. I have done so in the past but would have felt a lot better being able to place a limit on total spending.

Employers might also find it handy to name employees as authorized users and set a limit for business spending. But in the end, it's still up to the primary user to keep track of spending.

Memorial Cup. After spirited comeback in second, Portland puts OHL champs away in game's final frame

They made it interesting but the London Knights couldn't pull it out.

On Monday

Winterhawks	Knights

After roaring back from a 3-0 second-period deficit, the Knights couldn't complete the comeback and fell 6-3 to a powerhouse Portland Winterhawks at the Credit Union Centre in Saskatoon on Monday night.

The Knights came out of the gate sluggish, and the Western Hockey League champions, who were coming off a surprising 7-4 loss to the Halifax Mooseheads, made them pay. Ty Rattie's beautiful backhand deke gave Portland a 3-0 lead 10:23 into the second frame.

That's when London finally woke up, and 14 seconds later Knights forward Scott Harrington started the comeback before Alex Broadhurst and Bo Horvat scored to tie the contest at 1:38 of the final frame.

But Portland finally pushed back with three goals to put the game away and chase Knights netminder Anthony Stolarz from the game.

The Knights, who boast a record of 1-1, will finish the round-robin against the Mooseheads on Tuesday.

Rattie led Portland with two goals while Taylor Leier, Oliver Bjorkstrand, Derrick Pouliot and Chase De Leo rounded out the scoring for the Winterhawks.

Red Wings leap past Blackhawks to take series lead

Gustav Nyquist and Drew Miller scored 31 seconds apart midway through the second period and Pavel Datsyuk restored a two-goal lead in the third to help the Detroit Red Wings beat the Chicago Blackhawks 3-1 Monday night to take a 2-1 lead in the second round series.

Patrick Kane scored 4:35 into the third period to pull Chicago within one. The Blackhawks celebrated as if they tied the game about a minute later, but Andrew Shaw's goal was waved off because he was in the crease.

The seventh-seeded Red Wings have a shot to put the top-seeded Blackhawks on the brink of elimination Thursday night in Game 4.

Knights prospects flying under the radar

Max Domi holds the OHL championship trophy last Monday at Budweiser Gardens. THE CANADIAN PRESS

In most other years, Knights forward Max Domi would probably garner more attention at the MasterCard Memorial Cup.

The son of former tough guy Tie Domi is expected to be taken in the first round of next month's NHL draft, but with the three top North American-based prospects playing at the Credit Union Centre in Saskatoon, this year's Memorial Cup is more stacked than usual.

That suits Domi and a host of other potential picks just fine.

NHL scouts have descended on the tournament as top prospects Seth Jones of the Portland Winterhawks, and Nathan MacKinnon and Jonathan Drouin of the Halifax Mooseheads, play their final games before the draft.

Having the trio in one place means other players expected to be high draft picks can focus on the tournament.

"I know those guys pretty well and they're great guys and awesome hockey players," said Domi, who is ranked No. 19 among North Americans by NHL Central Scouting. "We're just worried about how the London Knights play and not really anything else to be honest. We focus on ourselves and the team and let the rest take care of itself."

Knights teammate Bo Horvat, ranked 15th, says that although the draft is never completely out of his mind, the goal is to win the CHL title.

"There's always competition but I've played on teams with them before and we're all good friends," he said. "I don't feel the pressure. You've just got to play your game and not worry about the draft too much."

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
If you believe in what you are doing with all your heart, nothing can stop you. The Sun is now moving through the communications area of your chart. It should make it easy to get others to do your bidding.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
If you have a secret of some sort, you must keep it to yourself today. The moment you let one person in on the details, everyone will know. Some people are such gossips.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Although the Sun is now moving through your birth sign, it seems you are still worrying about mistakes you made in the past. Why? Yesterday is over and done.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You must expect to be more emotional about certain things over the next few weeks while the Sun creeps through the most sensitive area of your chart. Control those emotions but don't deny them.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Try to stand back from what you are doing and see the bigger picture. You have come a long way in a short space of time and it's likely that you have veered a little off course.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You can sense that huge responsibilities are coming your way and no doubt that makes you want to hide under the duvet until they pass. That won't help in the slightest. Get out there and get busy.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You don't need to bludgeon your way to success. Libra is one of the more subtle signs of the zodiac, so find ways to get what you want without making a big noise about it — and certainly without making more enemies.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Different people will tell you different things today and if you are smart, you will ignore every last word of it. Your sixth sense is all you need to work out what is really going on.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
If you have something to say then get to the point quickly because those you deal with today won't be in the mood to listen to long explanations. Save the speeches for when you got their attention.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You've been so busy in recent weeks that you may not realize how much energy you have expended and how tired you are. The Sun's move through the wellbeing area of your chart urges you to slow down.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
The only reason a colleague is being so critical is because they resent your success. There is nothing they can say to take away what you have earned so there is no need to fear them.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Matters close to home will take up a lot of your time over the next few days, so you will need to arrange your timetable with care so you have time to fit everything in. SALLY BROMPTON
